With this as a starting point in our Christian perfection, we go on to blame-lessness of life. This is a trait also indispensible. People of this characteristic have always been pleasing to the Lord. Paul was so sincere in his heart and careful and blameless in his life that he olways had a conscience you'd of offense toward God and man. Christian perfection does not consist in what a man does as in what he is. Grace is mentioned before greatness.

Another important element in Christian perfections as a synettical developtian perfectness is a symetrical development of the whole man. In the elements of our Christian character it is desirable that there should be nothing defective, weak or lacking. That in the matter of our worship there should be no mixture of insincerity, heathenish rites, wordliness or error of any kind. That in the performance of the duties of life we should be thoroughly trustworthy, innocent and upright. It is as painful to see a deformed Christian character as it is to behold a defective human form. Our Christian morality should be like the human body with no member or organ wanting or imperiest. tian perfectness is a symetrical develop-should be like the human body with no member or organ wanting or imperiect. The development into the perfection of a true Christian character essures us the realization of the second particular in the admonition of the text. If we so grow into the image of our Master we shall be of good comfort. Without true integrity of character, without sincerity in our desire after God and holiness, we cannot be of good comfort. But looking conscientiously after these conscientiously after these

MATTERS OF COLLOSAL IMPORTANCE, our comfort in God and joy in the Holy Ghost and communion with our Savior will be complete Our life will be a blessing and we shall be supremely blessing and we shall be supremely happy.

And now a word on the next admonition of the apostle, "Be of one mind, live in peace." I have no especial reason to enforce this exhortation further than the dangers Satan is always eager to throw into our ways. You know dissensions are so easy to arise and so hard to dispel. This is so true that it is wise to be careful and prayer. and so hard to disper. This is so the that it is wise to be careful and prayerful and watchful against the eneroachments of strike. In our work together I am happy to say we have had remarkable unanimity of feeling and action. I hope unanimity of feeling and action. I hope and pray it may always be so. I am sure nothing can so soon and so thoroughly frustrate good plans and destroy a good work as division and lack of unity of spirit. If you would be sure of continual success in church work heed this admonition from a retiring paster. "And the God of love and peace shall be with you." He only is the author of true peace in the soul and in an organized body of people. Being in right relations with Him will assure peace, hely and blessed. And now, brethren, I regret in my deepest heart to say adden. I have as a pastor in this city for the past twelve years had most pleasant associations. From the pastors and people of other churches I have received more consideration and kindness than I have deserved. I cherkindness than I have deserved. I cherish for all the warmest feelings of friendship. Year by year these pleas-nt sequaintances have increased and the friendly smiles and warm greetings and hearty handshakes that I have re-ceived on the streets and in the homes of the Wheeling people, I will miss. But I will always hold these pleasant things in grateful recollection.

"To the little children I have been very closely drawn; and with the young people—my hope, my comfort, my pride—I have been most warmly at-tached; and with those who have grown old with service and years I have had much sweet counsel and comfort. These ties of affection bound together by God's grace, and fused into one by the hot furnace of affliction and sorrow, it pains me now to sever. These were pleasant friendships. Ah, we do not sever them; we are friends still and ever will be, though no longer as pastor and people, we yet are friends and brethren in Jesus Christ. ties of affection bound together by God's

"To the young and the vigorous and the strons, I want to commend the few old people of your number. Young people, look carefully sight the aged and infirm ones of the church; they bore the burden in the heat of the day when the burden of the church was heavy. Now let them not be forgotten when they can seldom or no longer come out. They are but few; let them know that they are not forgotten. Visit come out. They are but few; let them know that they are not lorgoiten. Visit Mother Corson at the Home for Friendless and Aged Women; all her friends and family are gone and she is left alone; be sons and daughters to her for Jesus' sake. And so with others whom you know. And now to each and all, I as your former pastor and spiritual guide in Jesus Christ, as I depart I wish you a father's richest benediction and extend you a brother's warm love, and wish you a hearty God's speed in your Christian life. Amen."

First Presbyterian Church

At the First Presbyterian church last At the First Presbyterian church last night a special praise and song service was held. Dr. Canningham's sermon was short, from I Kines, 3d, 5th, his theme being the life of John Newton. All the hymns were Newton's. The choir also sung several quartets of his composition. It is composed of W. B. Day, tenor, W. D. McCoy, basso, Miss Grace Updegraff, of Mt. Pleasant, O., soprano, and Miss Grace Finnell, alto.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PHOTOS.

Send in Your Coupons Now for the Portfolios.

Subscribers should send in their six coupons for World's Fair portfolio No. 2 at once. While the unexpected demand for the books has caused delay in their delivery they will be along in good time. This explanation should suggest to those who have not yet received part I that it is not necessary to write letters inquiring why the book is delayed. If portfolio No. 2 should reach any one entitled to both before part I is received it will be time to write about it, as there may be a mistake, but until that happens a little patience should be ex-

It is hoped that the publishers will be able to deliver both parts in a lew days, and when they are sent out those first on the list will naturally receive the books the carlier, so that those who send in their part II coupous now will receive the books as soon as anybody.

Readers are again asked to send the dime in coin and not in stamps.

Coi. B. F. Martin.

Reports have gone out that Col. B. F. Martin, of Grafton, formerly representative in Congress from the Second district, was in this city in a dying condition. Colonel Martin, who is at Dr. McMaster's hospital, was seen yesterday by an INTELLIGENCER reporter, and is about the liveliest dead man in the state. His trouble is yielding to treatment and he is greatly improved. His general teath is good, and he has no idea of giving up the activities of highest yet. Mrs. Martin goes home today or to-morrow to open her house, and will be accompanied by Mrs. McMaster.

A Narrow Escape.

Saturday afternoon a woman who resides on South Main street, near Twentysides on South Mannatrest, near Twentysixth, had a very narrow escape. She was sweeping the pavement between the car tracks when a car approached.
The bell was sounded and passengers shouted to the woman to get off the track, but on account of deafness she did not hear the warnings. The car could not be stopped in time, and the operator reached over the dashboard and catching her around the body held

Dr. Baird's Faheral.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Dr. Will J. Baird took place Saturday afternoon from the residence of his mother on Fourteenth street. The services were largely attended and conducted by Rev. Dr. D. A. Cunningham. The pall bearers were Messrs. Jules and Garth Hearne, Percy Caldwell, Harry Whitaker, Harry Ott and Charles Kittinger, the latter of Seattle. The interment was private and at Mr. Wood cemetery. Wood cometery.

Morrison's "Faust," to be seen at the Opera House next Friday evening, the New York Tribute says:

Mr. Morrison's portrayal of the character of Mephido was a finished plece of acting. He has a magnificent voice under perfect control, an unusual scope of facial expression, a fine stage presence, a captivating grace of movement and a perfect conception of the character he portrayed. He has gathered around him a strong company.

A Missing Man.

One of the street car operators in the employ of the Wheeling railway, T. T. Smith, is mysteriously missing. He disappeared about a week ago and has not been heard of or seen since. Except that for several days he was downcast, no cause for the strange disappearance can be framed.
